The total outstanding varied from day-to-day and it was Rs. 3550:15 crore on 21.11.1995 and Rs. 100 crore on 7.12.1995.

(c) and (d) The objective of RBI's intervention in the money market through refinance and reverse repo facility is to moderate the volatility in the overnight call money rates. Since the end of October 1995 and upto November 20, 1995 considerable volatility was witnessed in the call money market. During the period, the inter-bank call money rate rose sharply and ruled in the range of 14 to 85 per cent (except on November 19, 1995 when the call rate ruled in the rnnpe of 0.25 to 8 per cent as it was last Friday of the Reporting Fortnight). RBI's intervention helped reducing the overnight call money rates within the ranged of 9 per cent to 25 per cent from November 21 onwards (except on November 24, 1995 when the call rate ruled at less than one per cent as it was last Friday of the Reporting Fortnight).

(e) and (f) Small Public investors are not permitted to participate in the call money market, hence, RBI's intervention through refinance as also reverse repo operation will have no impact on them.
